Brigadier General J. J. Borree, the Adjutant General of California, was assigned to command the Brigade.* General Borree resigned December 13, 1924, and Colonel David P. Barrows was assigned to command the 79th Brigade in lieu of Brigadier General. Colonel Barrows remained in command of the Brigade, as Colonel, until June 18, 1925, at which time he was promoted Brigadier General and assigned to command the 79th Infantry Brigade. General Barrows remained in command of the Brigade until June 18, 1926, when he was assigned to the command of the 40th Division, California National Guard, which was organized on that date.

Upon the resignation of General Barrows, Colonel Walter P. Story, commanding the 160th Infantry Regiment, was promoted Brigadier General and assigned to command the 79th Infantry Brigade. General Story remained in command until May 6, 1929, when the Brigade was redesignated and became the 80th Brigade.

On March 18, 1930, a new Brigade Headquarters was organized, stationed in Sacramento and designated Headquarters, 79th Infantry Brigade. Brigadier General Wallace A. Mason was placed in command of the new organization. General Mason remained in command of the Brigade until September 30, 1938, at which time he was placed on the retired list. Upon the retirement of General Mason on October 1, 1938, Brigadier General R. E. Mittlestaedt was assigned to command the 79th.

Headquarters, 79th Brigade was restationed and located at Berkeley, March 16, 1925, and on October 16, 1926, was again restationed and located at Los Angeles, where it remained until the 79th was redesignated as the 80th Brigade on May 6, 1929.*

When the 79th was redesignated the 80th Brigade in Los Angeles, the 160th Infantry Regiment and the 185th, a newly organized unit, were assigned to the 80th Brigade. To the new 79th Brigade was assigned the 159th Infantry, San Francisco, and the 184th with Headquarters in Sacramento.

Activities: (continued)

The 79th Infantry Brigade attended all annual training encampments at San Luis Obispo.

On July 5, 1934, Brigadier General Howard, the Adjutant General of the State, authorized Major General David P. Barrows, Commander of the 40th Division, to call for emergency duty in San Francisco during the water front strike, the 250th Coast Artillery, the 159th Infantry Regiment and Company D of the 184th Infantry Regiment. The calls were completed about 1:30 P. M., and mobilization started immediately. Companies E and H of the 159th Infantry and Company D of the 184th Infantry located at Gilroy, completed mobilizing by 4:25 P. M. The 1st Battalion of the 159th Infantry in Oakland, completed mobilization by 4:30 P. M. The 159th Infantry units in Berkeley had completed mobilization at 5:00 P. M. Units in San Francisco had sufficient troops to enable them to move out at 5:00 P. M.*

Following the original call, General Barrows determined that certain other units of the 184th Infantry should be mobilized and ordered into service. Company L, 184th Infantry, Napa, and Company K, 184th Infantry, Santa Rosa were ordered to duty. The 159th Infantry and 184th Infantry units were placed under the command of Colonel R. E. Mittlestaedt of the 250th Coast Artillery and Senior Colonel of the three regiments and all movements of these units to the docks were made under his instructions.

On Governor's Day at the 1934 annual training encampment at San Luis Obispo, Governor Frank F. Merriam received a stand of colors, the National Flag and the Four-Star Flag of the Governor, Commander-in-chief of the California National Guard. The Governor, who had gained a profound respect and regard for the National Guard, had expressed a desire to visit the 79th Brigade Camp at San Luis Obispo. "Governor's Day" was, therefore, established for August 9th. Governor Merriam was met at the main entrance of the Camp by a battalion escort of honor from the 159th Infantry, Company A, 184th Infantry and Company G, 159th Infantry. These units escorted the Governor to his quarters at the officers' Club where he was officially greeted by General Barrows, Camp Commander, and General Seth Howard, the Adjutant General. The Governor then proceeded to the main parade grounds where troops were drawn up in line of battalion masses. All available parking space along California Drive was occupied by cars of visitors who had waited since early morning to witness the ceremony. Troops were called to attention, and presented first to the Commander of Troops and then to the Governor. Organizations stood at ease as an escort composed of a Company from each of the two Infantry Regiments marched to the center, thence to the East end of the parade ground where the colors were being unfurled to the breeze. After the ceremony of receiving the colors had been concluded, the regiments returned to the center of the grounds where officers and guidons of the command had been formed. With bands playing and colors flying, officers, guidons and escort marched forward, halting ten paces from the reviewing stand. Officers and guidons saluted. General Barrows stepped from the reviewing stand and in a few well chosen words presented the Governor with the colors, explaining that it was a custom long observed by the National Guard of California. Governor Merriam responded briefly, expressing his appreciation of the courtesy, also complimenting the National Guard on its performance of duty during the waterfront strike in San Francisco.*

Governor Merriam's remarks to the troops of the 79th Brigade were in part as follows: "The presentation of flags to me upon reaching the beautiful grounds where you are located is indeed a surprise. I know of nothing finer you men could do; I appreciate them not for what they cost, but for the things they represent, and I am sure that you appreciate this great flag that is flying over there, the flag under which you march. That is the spirit in which I appreciate them, not the material of which they are made but those things for which they stand."

Complimenting the men of the 159th Infantry and the 184th Infantry Regiments, which make up the 79th Brigade, the Governor stated he was exceedingly happy to be able to mingle with the men who had been in a great crisis, not only in the State of California, but in the entire nation. "You probably did not realize it -I didn't realize it - I mean the real crisis that confronted the people of the State of California. I am proud of the way in which you men by your fine spirit, by the fine manner in which you met the emergency and the splendid part you played, in subduing it. The decisions that you men were able to make compelled recognition of the authority of the State of California, and I desire to convey to you men and to the men who are assembled on these grounds today, the greetings of the State of California and the compliments of the people of California and I say that you deserve it."

The 79th Brigade was also complimented by Army and Navy Officers on its appearance. Following the presentation of the colors to the Governor, the troops passed in review in a long column of massed battalions, with bayonets and helmets gleaming in the sun. A fine spectacle which aroused the enthusiastic admiration of the Governor and all who witnessed it.*

Activities: (continued)

The 79th Infantry Brigade had many noted visitors during the encampment, among whom were Colonel Geary, the National Guard officer for the Ninth Corps Areas, General Walter P. Story, commander of the 80th Brigade, Colonel Harcourt Harvey, Commanding officer of the 160th Infantry, and many others including Professor Eugene Neuhaus of the Art Department of the University of California, whom many remembered for his fine paintings of the mountains surrounding the Camp at San Luis Obispo.*

Since the organization of the 79th Brigade in 1930, its activities have been limited. The units of the Brigade including Headquarters hold an enviable record for attendance at drill. The idea was that if a man was not at drill he could not learn how to be a soldier, and if a soldier was not interested enough in his organization to attend drill he ought not to be in the National Guard. This is the main reason for the high record established by the 79th Brigade as one of the leading organizations of the California National Guard.
