THE FREE COMPANY OF CATALONIAN VOLUNTEERS

Al Miramontes

Descendant of Sebastian Armas y Lopez, Spanish Artillery de Piquete

(Editor's Note: In the course of researching the historical context of ancestor Sebastian Armas y Lopez, Al Miramontes uncovered the muster lists of the soldiers that were sent by Spain to reinforce the presidial garrisons and their coastal batteries during the late Eighteenth century. Many of those men sent to San Diego served tours of duty at Fort Guijarros. In turn, these artillerists taught their skills to men like Armas y Lopez.)

The Free Company of Catalonian Volunteers, its personnel married, was to go to California as a military contingent. Most of the Catalonians arrived in California in the early part of 1796. Their commander was Lieutenant Colonel Pedro de Alberni. The company included a captain, two lieutenants, and seventy-two men. The troops were assigned to the three presidios of San Diego, Monterey and San Francisco. Lieutenant Colonel Pedro Alberni, Captain of the Catalonian Volunteers, became the commander of San Francisco, where twenty-five of his men were stationed. Lieutenant Font was sent to San Diego with twenty-five men. Sub-Lieutenant Simon Suarez remained at Monterey, with 9 men, and a sergeant and thirteen men being scattered at various duties. The artillery detachment under Sergeant Jose Roen was distributed between the three presidios.
