HISTORY OF CMA

The California Military Academy - CMA - stands tall among OCS Programs across the country. It was in the summer of 1950, as a result of a scarcity of Junior Officers in the California National Guard, that Major General C. D. O'Sullivan, Commanding General of the 49th Division, sought and received Department of The Army sanction for the Academy. It was the first Officer Candidate School established outside of the regular Army, and as such, came under close scrutiny from all quarters.

The CMA has surpassed a quarter-century of service, continuing it's theme "Learn Today, Lead Tomorrow". To date, the Academy has commissioned in excess of 2,500 second lieutenants. It is the principal source of new officers for the California Army National Guard. In keeping with the "One Army Concept" of the Department of the Army, CMA training is also made available to members of the United States Army Reserve.

The Academy is accredited by both the California State University System and the Department of the Army. It's program of instruction parallels that of the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia.

CMA CLASS OF 1976

There are many paths to success in the modern Army National Guard of today. While some men and women prefer enlisted service towards the goals of national defense, others aspire to the officer corps.

May 1975, 104 young men and women selected the path which guided them through a year of tedious training at the California Military Academy. The regard for this rigorous schooling was additional responsibility - - the responsibility which goes with a commission as a second lieutenant in the California Army National Guard and United States Army Reserve.

From the very first day of Phase I it was apparent that the road to graduation would be a test of mental and physical endurance. Classroom instruction was to be with us for a full year, but it was the simulated pressure of combat that helped to develop us during Phase II at Camp San Luis Obispo. As the program continued, numbers grew smaller. By the second drill of Phase III, some 40% of our initial complement has "washed out". It was evident that only the truly dedicated among us would experience Graduation Day.

During Phase III it was obvious that stress had taken it's toll. Instructional periods were well thought-out and presented. Then came the time to apply classroom-learned principles to actual situations. It was then that we found we did not know all the answers. The experiences and the confidence gained will serve as the cornerstones of the military careers of the "Class of 1976".

As CMA graduates, we are especially concerned that our future endeavors will reflect the traditions, as well as the expectations of this outstanding institution. To those who succeed us in the California Military Academy, we re-emphasize the ever present challenge to "Learn Today and Lead Tomorrow".

The National Guard and the Army Reserve provide two elements basic to society--discipline and security. A society without discipline is a society without form, without order--chaos. That is why I welcome the discipline implicit in your identity as soldiers; it means that you knowingly accept the responsibility of leadership and understand the limits of the authority it implies.

As it's commander-in-chief, I know what the National Guard means to the people of California. It represents an invaluable asset to them and to the entire nation, and so does the Reserve. The tradition you are a part of is a noble one; you are doing a vital job, and you are doing it at less cost to your country than is possible in any other mean. I commend and congratulate each one of you. Be brave, be noble and be ready!

Edmund G. Brown, Jr.
Governor of California

FRANK J. SCHOBER
MAJOR GENERAL
COMMANDING
STATE MILITARY FORCES

Your service in the National Guard is an act of faith in America and in the people of this great State. I appreciate the difficulty of your dual role--as members of an immediate assistance force to this state in times of emergency, and as members of the Federal Armed Forces when mobilized by the President. Your dual mission is clear. Be ready for it. The people of this state--all citizens of this nation--depend on you.

To the Class of 1977 of the California Military Academy, I join with Governor Brown and General Schober in congratulating you upon the completion of your studies and work to become officers of the National Guard and the Army Reserve. And to the members of the Class of 1977, I bid you welcome and good fortune as you follow your aspirations to qualify for the same status.

Serving one's country is a privilege, and to be able to do so as an Officer in the time honored tradition of the militia represents a further honor for the select number of those accepted by trial and test for the role. You may all truly feel pride and a sense of accomplishment in your nomination or graduation, as the case may be, portending, a professional career that will bring with it a sense of personal satisfaction and realization of significant contribution to the welfare of your country and your own community.

The National Guard and the Reserve are the lineal descendants of the minute men who put down their farming implements and their tools of trade two hundred years ago to pick up the muskets with which they sounded at Concord and Lexington the first clear notes of determination that America should be free. For two centuries that tradition of military service in time of need has come down through successive generations of Americans as the splendid testimony to their dedication to the principles of freedom and individual liberty upon which our nation was founded and under which it continues to prosper. To be a part of that tradition, to share in its full flowering and to contribute to the realization of its meaning in terms of the greatness of a people and their strength to defend themselves against any and all tyranny should offer an inspiration to each of you as you go on to a future in your chosen service which need be limited only by the measure of your own commitment and effort.

California is justifiably proud of the vision which underlies its development of the officer candidate program that annually produces its complement of fine young men and women for command and staff roles of the future. The Second Lieutenants who are graduated each year represent the coming leadership of the California National Guard and the Army Reserve. They are also the kind of young men and women in whom we can place the future of our great country with confidence and trust, for their patriotism and their dedication as well as their competence has been tried and proven.

COL Robert E. Lytle June 1974 to January 1976

COL George W. Titus January 1976 to June 1976

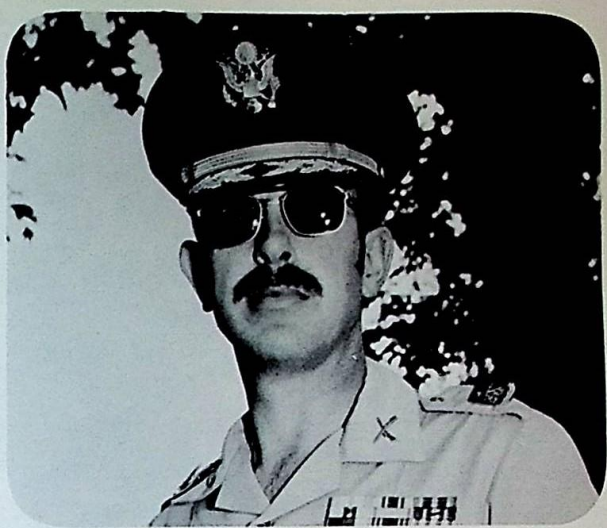

Your recent graduation from the California Military Academy was an achievement in which you can be justly proud. We are hopeful it will be the beginning of a long and productive career with the California National Guard. By completing the physical and mental rigors of the program, you have demonstrated your dedication and desire to attain excellence. In spite of this investment and the hardships you endured, your real value to the National Guard has yet to be realized. However; if you dedicate yourself to the principles of military professionalism, you will play a key role in the future of the National Guard.

All the way with CMA - double time.

"Wish he'd run that jazz past me again in Waltz time"

"Cadets, enjoy standing here, we're about to sit for an hour."

Lunch line up, in top coat with stiff stance.

Four hours deep and looking interested.

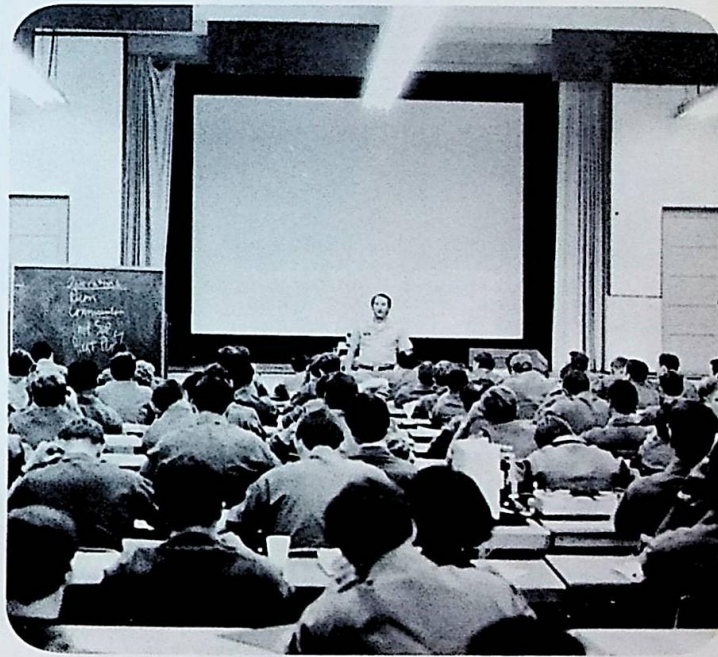

"He can't be right"

". . . and then we'll hook the wires to your fingers and CRANK like crazy."

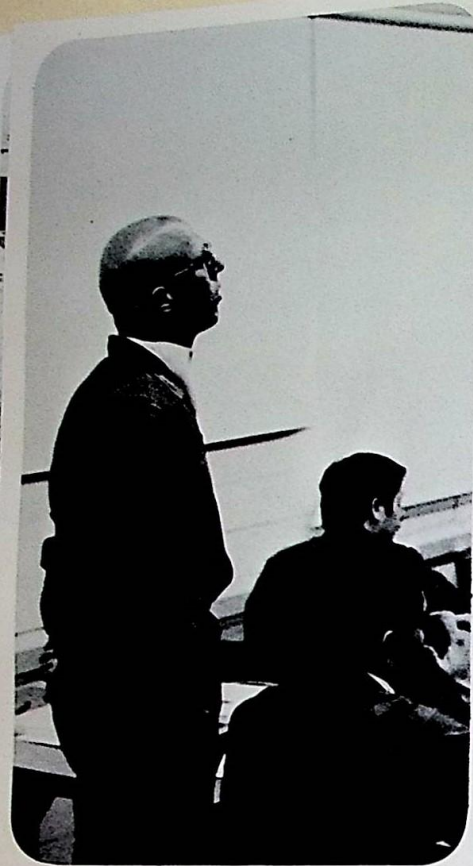

"My tooth is loose!"

"Hey! Over Here" I'm the instructor."

"It was only this big, but it put up a hell of a fight."

"I did use my head, nobody told me the "grinder" was a "parade field".
Sugar and spice and everything nice . . .

"Cadet James, chewing fingernails won't solve this"

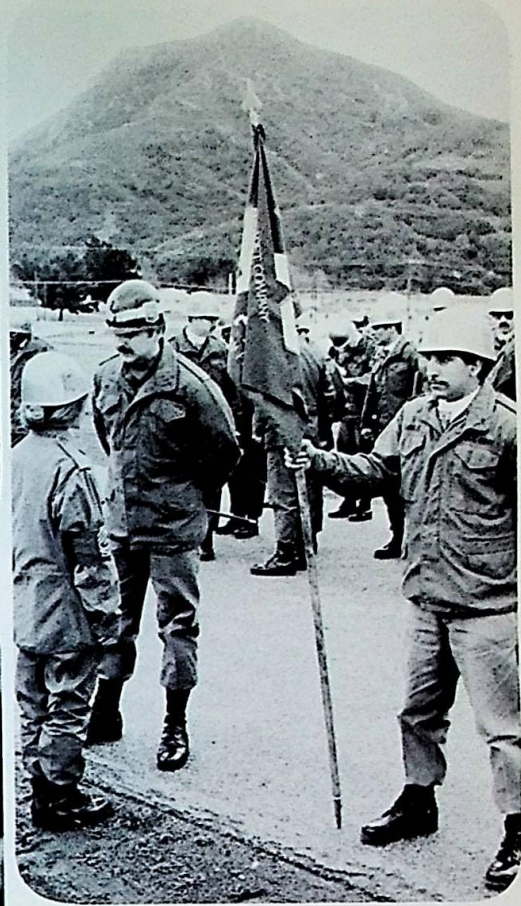

"Cadets, can I have your undivided attention?"

An X in the lower right hand corner will give you the game.

"This is my rifle - this is my . . ."

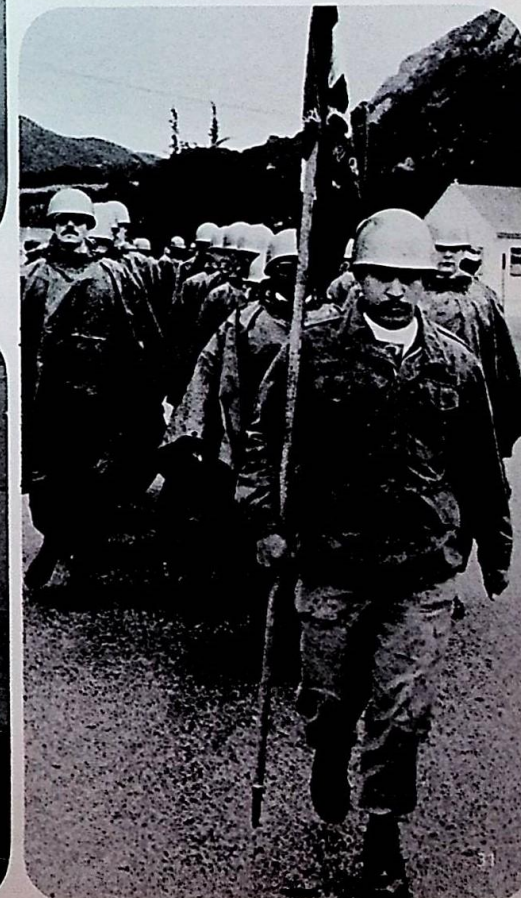

"Tears won't get those troops in ranks, Cadet"

It's little known, but Bat Man has an auxiliary brigade.

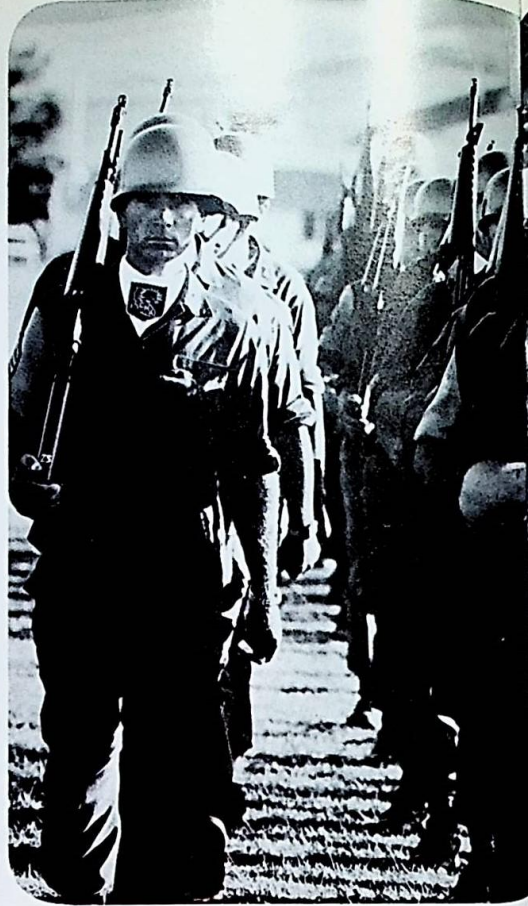

"You know, ants have amazing organizational ability"

"On your mark . . . Get set . . ."

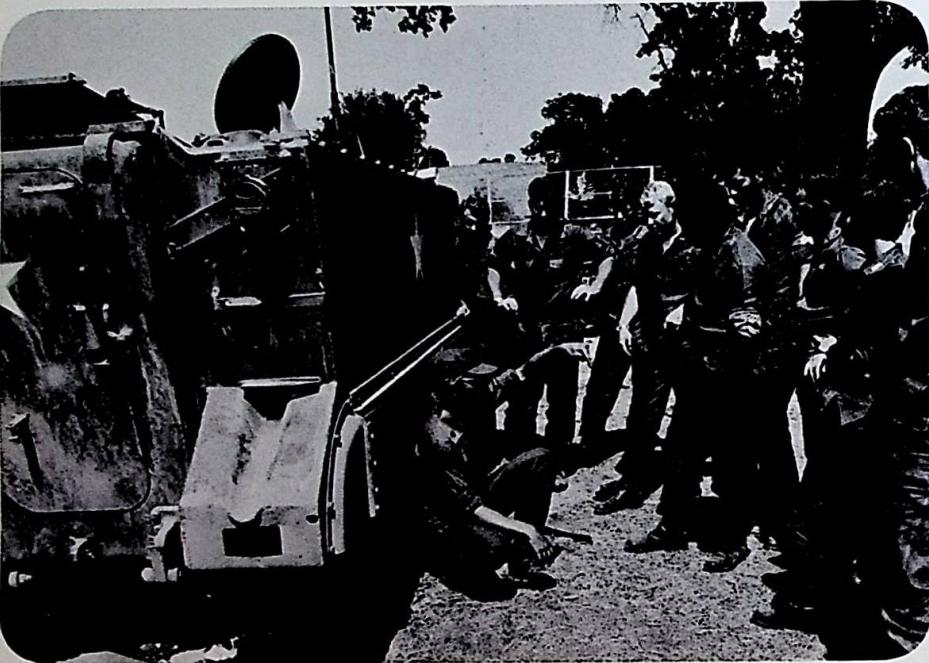

"Wait - a - minute, Adair, We've gone too far, that's the ocean"

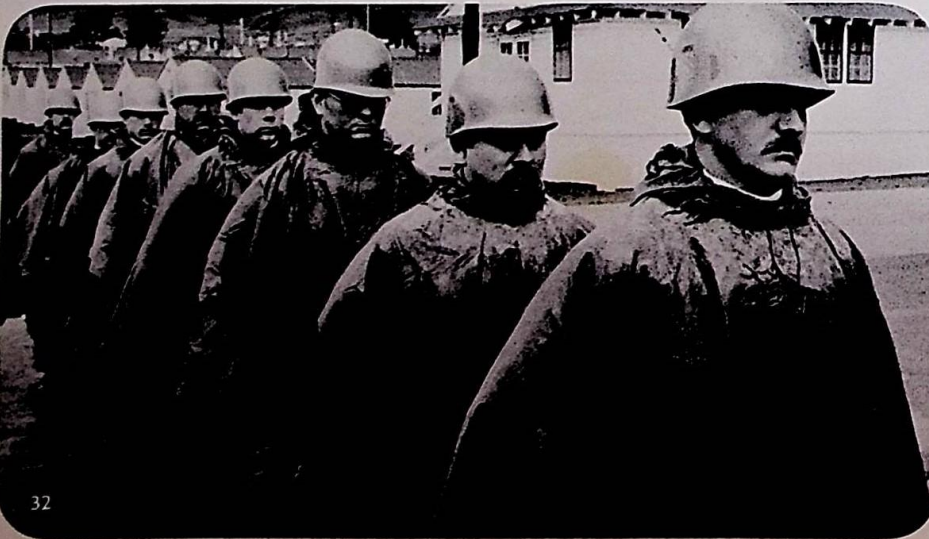

"She Wore a Yellow Ribbon, is just not my song"

"Say, this poncho's good for TAC's foaming at the mouth too"

"As instructor, I insist that we all kneel down"

Rain, rain go away - come back another day.

"It's easy, just follow the yellow brick road over there"

Home is five days away and counting.

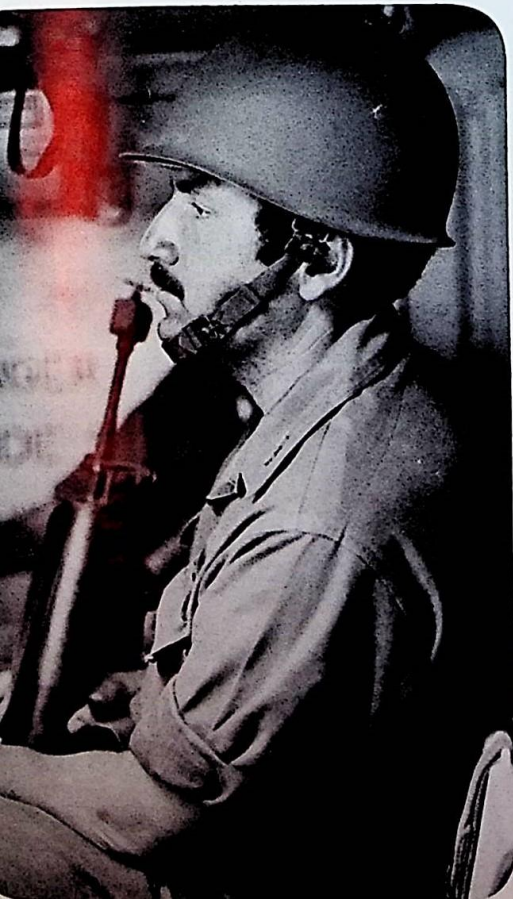

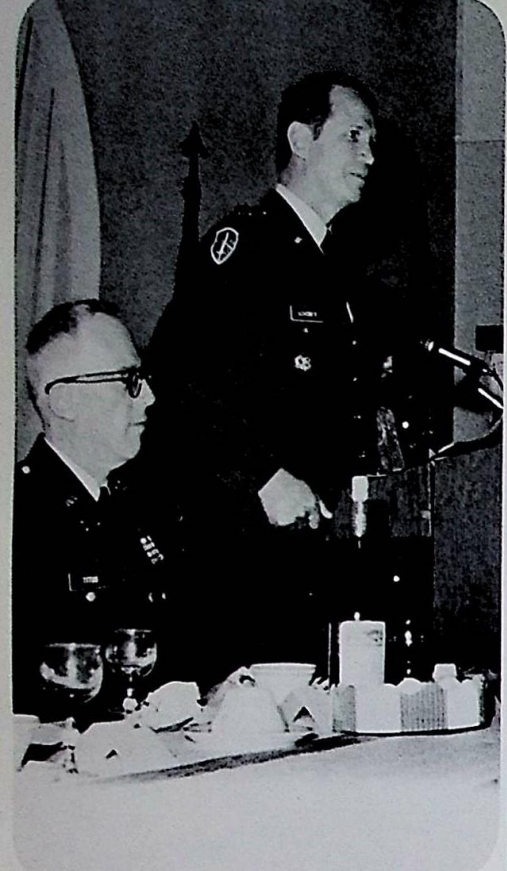

"Flap your arms, and perch on that roof"

"That, Cadet, is antagonizing the bull with too much movement"

"Would you stop humming, "Rain Drops a - Fallin on my Head?"

General Schober addresses Cadet during Dining-In ceremonies at the O' Club.

That was very funny Cadet - comedians are fined $1.00 here however"

"But a toast to Mayor of Atascadero is going too far"

Colonel Titus requests a twenty minute intermission at the Dining-In.

Famous finger of father foils fickled frolics of fledging.

MG Schober introduces LTG Flanagan as keynote speaker to the graduating class of 1976.

MG Robert Johnson passes a gold bar to a CMA graduate of his Division.

Cadet Trapletti renders a salute and receives a diploma in return.

The graduating class of 103 Cadets presents itself before friends and relatives just prior to receiving the "Gold Bar"

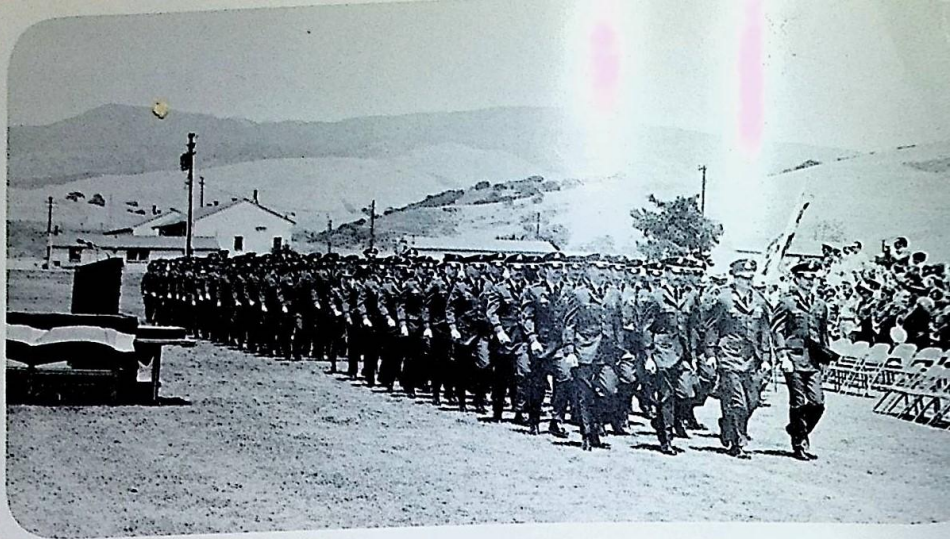

Approaching their final step as Cadets - Minutes later they were Lieutenants.

40th Division Commander, MG Johnson presents the bar and congratulations to newly commissioned Lt Edwards.

Senior Army Advisor LTC Paul Smith, administers the Oath to the graduating class.

Last march together as a Cadet Class - and a day they will all remember.

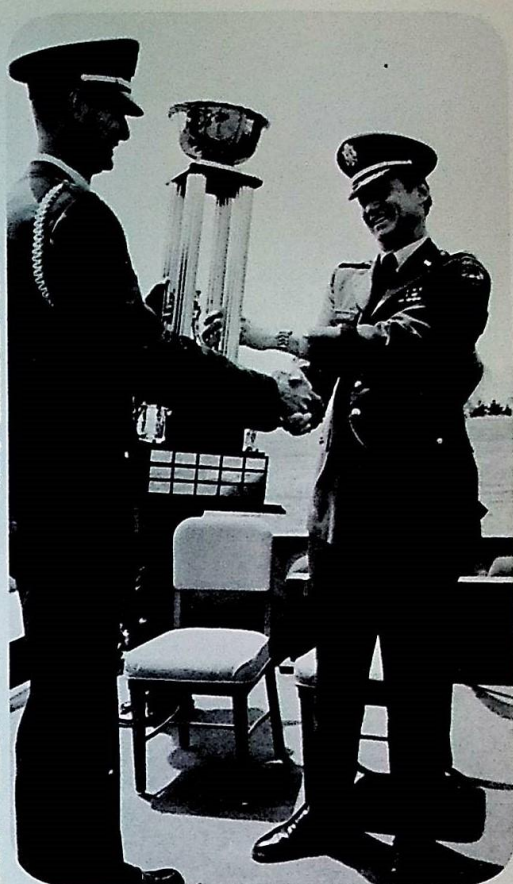

Graduating cadets listen intently to speakers who have traveled the road they are just beginning to follow.

Taking the oath in the tradition of the over 2,500 CMA graduates that preceded them.

The pleasant conclusion to a year of hard work and dedication.

Lieutenant Schuckert receives the Cadet Response Trophy from the Commanding General.

Lieutenant Peterson receives the Erickson Trophy.

Lieutenant Hipwell has his bars pinned on by his Father-In-Law, an officer in the British Army.

Precision has been Lieutenant Harris' style for a year - he expects no less from his wife.

MG Schober introduces his wife to a new Lieutenant and his lady at the Graduation Ball receiving line.

Lilting smile - a new gold bar - Lt Simmons, how lucky can a guy get? The beaming smiles tell it all for the Group during the Graduation Ball.

A toast all around to the Graduating Class of 1976. The beauty of a commission is reflected from the eyes of a beauty for LT Mardirosian.

Lieutenants in the '76 Class are TENACIOUS - they hang on with both hands.

Hard to remember that just a few days ago you were hassling with a TAC instead of swinging with your gal.

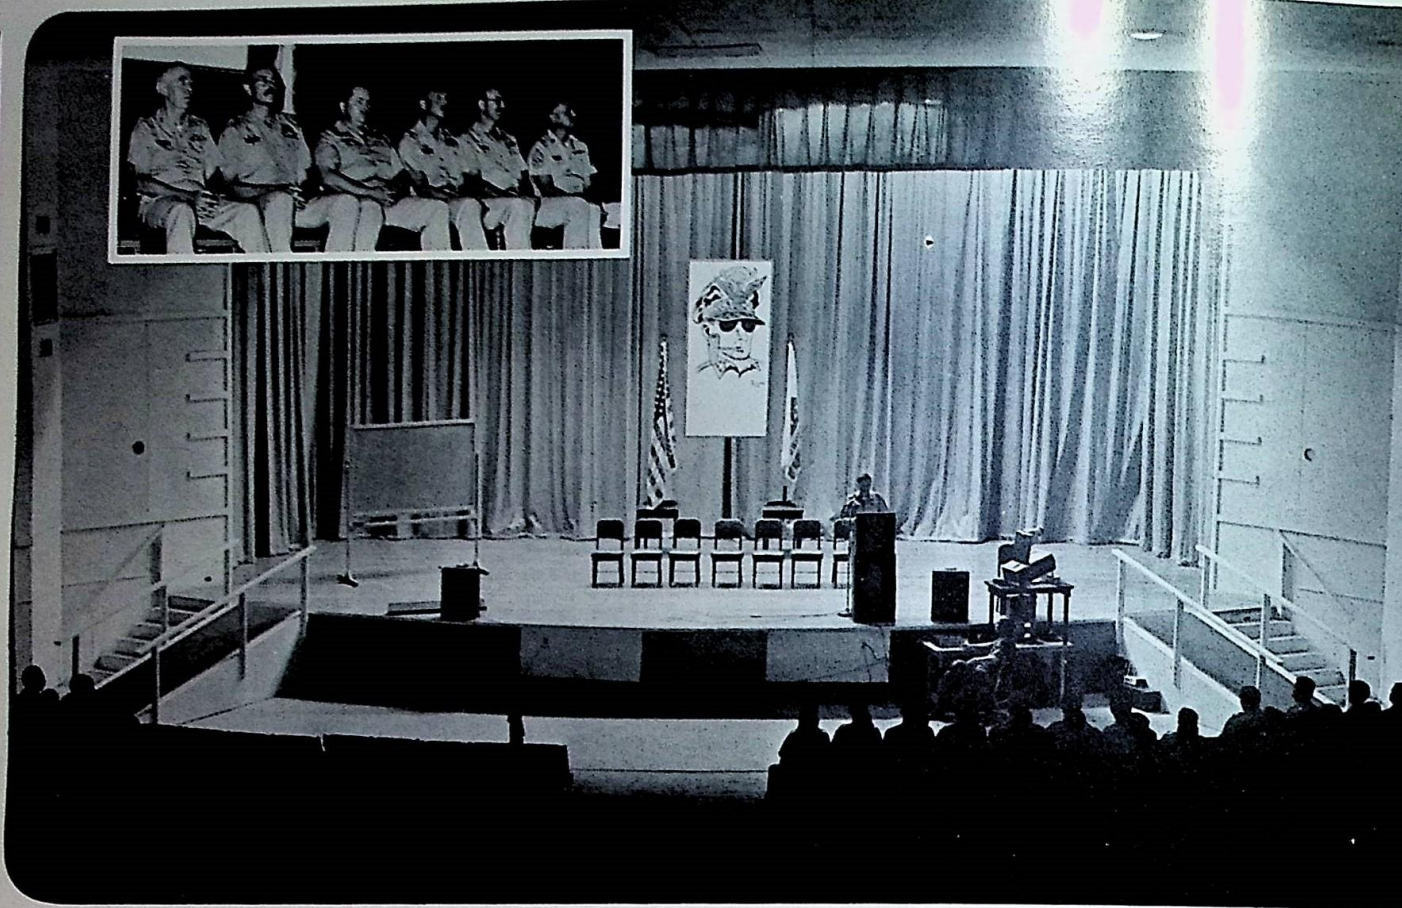

May the future be as bright as this moment reflects.

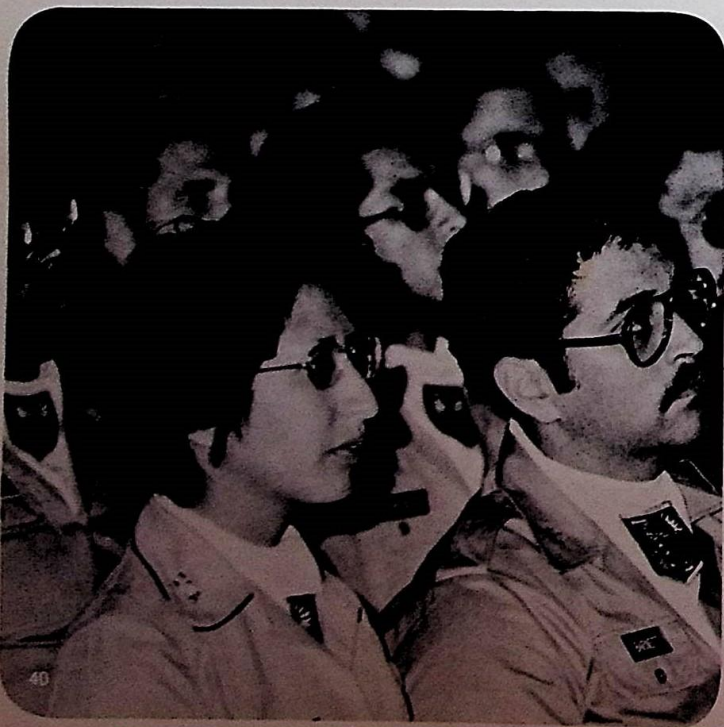

Lieutenants Trapletti and Holtman celebrate their accomplishments.
Thanks for the memory - Madonna Inn, San Luis Obispo, CMA, 1976.

A member of the 640th MP Company meets and greets a Junior Cadet at main gate, CSLO.

"I asked the TAC if there was anything more important than shining buckles, he said, "Give me ten"
"No Cadet, Military headwear in the 1st Cadet Company is not optional."

Stooping to the occasion - 1st Cadet Company members bend and shine.
"In counting-off Cadet, five comes after four."

But sir, from your height, how can you tell that I was 'eye-balling?'"

"Gosh, it'll be nice to replace this with a gold bar"

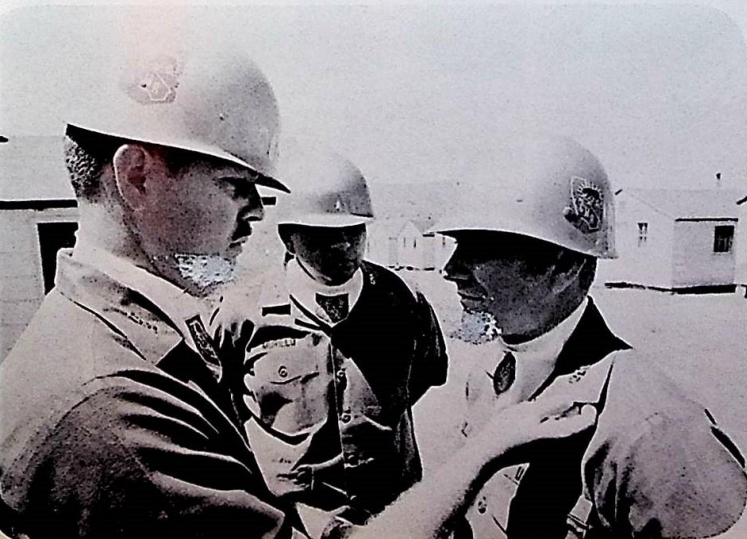

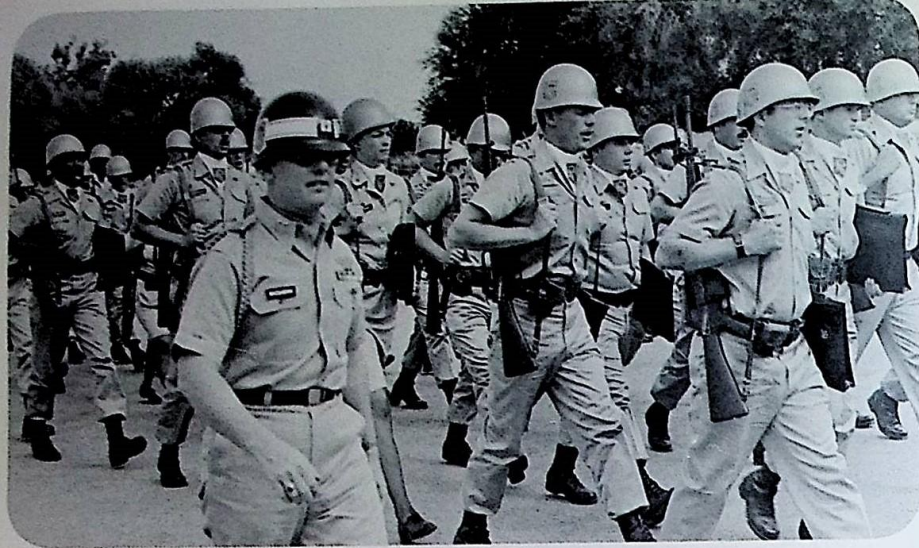

"But your Mom's not here, you'll just have to do it yourself."

And the beat goes on - a Cadet's job is never done.

"We're glad you showed up - without a fourth person we'd never sat down."

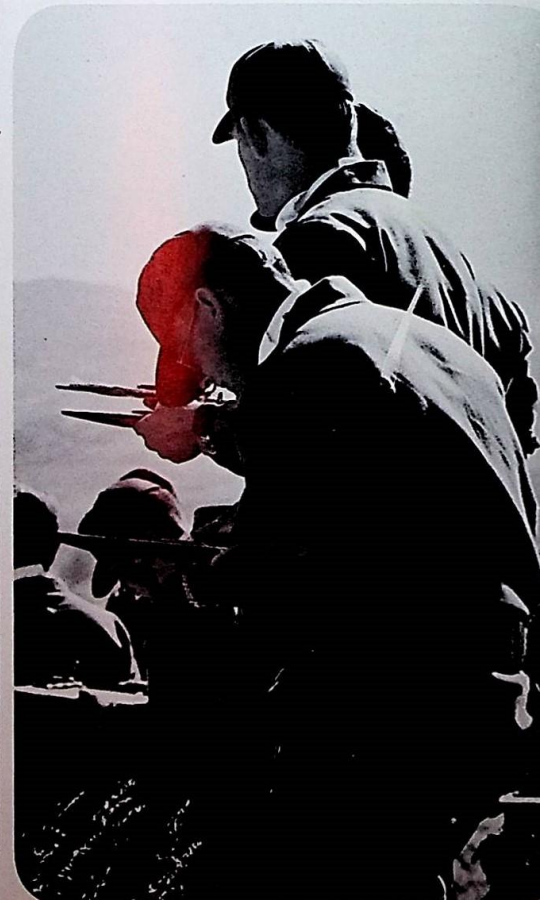

Marching feet and a sharp cadence is sure to wake those support troops up.

"The interchange to the Hollywood freeway is . . ."
"See that hill peak over there, now find it on your map."

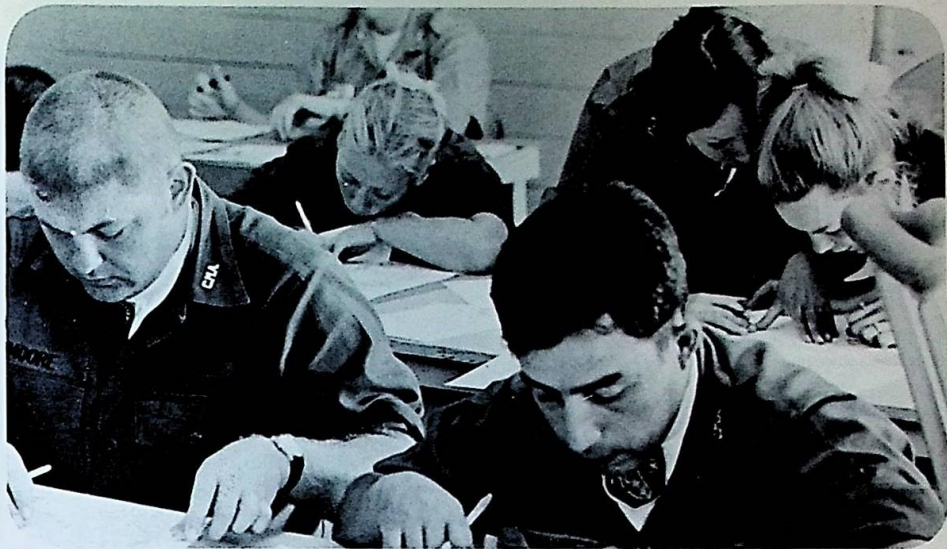

"Show him the safety latch, firing is not allowed in the classroom."
"The command, Cadets, was left shoulder arms."

"He's got to be kidding, who would want to find their way out of a paper bag?"
"These coordinates put us at a topless bar in Santa Maria."

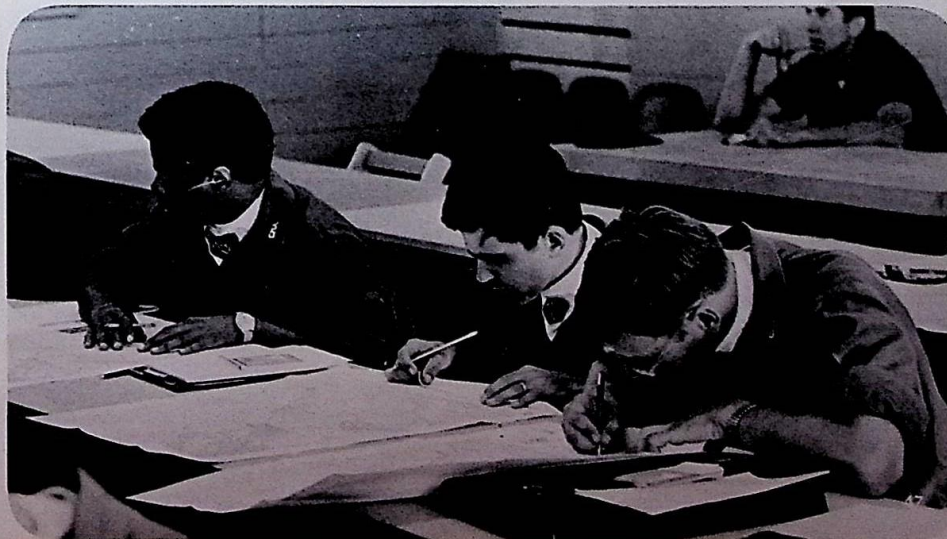

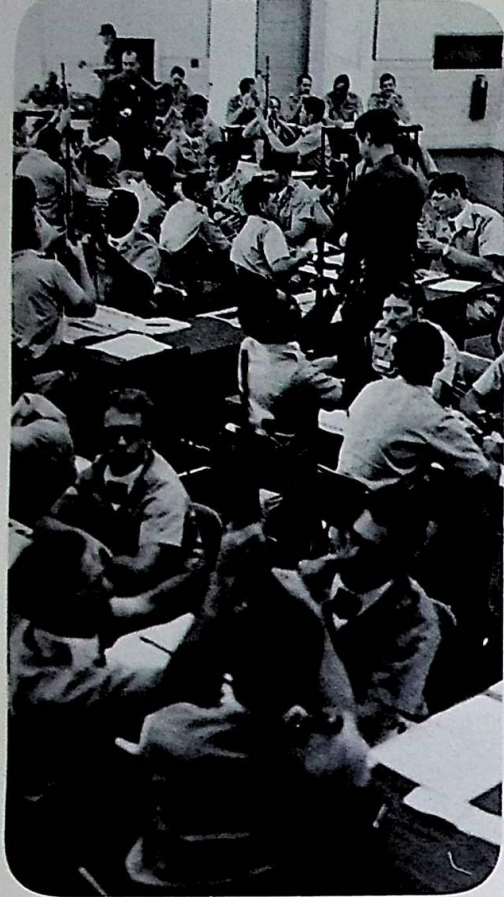

"Get my men to this objective - but I don't have any men yet."

CMA must lose more helmet liners this way.

"As the crow flies - 2 miles, as the Cadet marches - 10 miles."

"Make sure it's unloaded, you may sleep with it tonight."

"I've got to pick a better route, that last one was a lulu."

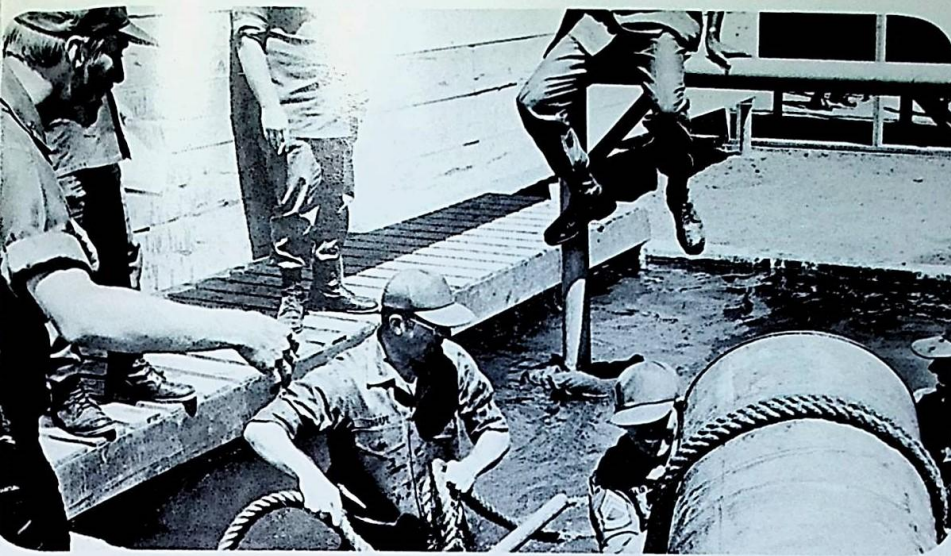

"Just pretend you're putting on eye shadow, and it will be alined."

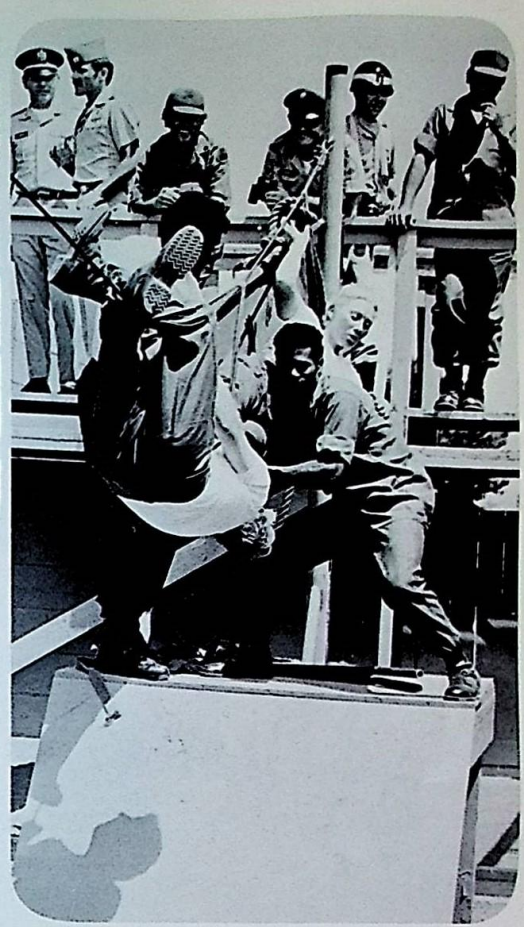

"Take a reading on a stationary object - not that bird."

". . . and did you hear the one about the traveling salesman?"

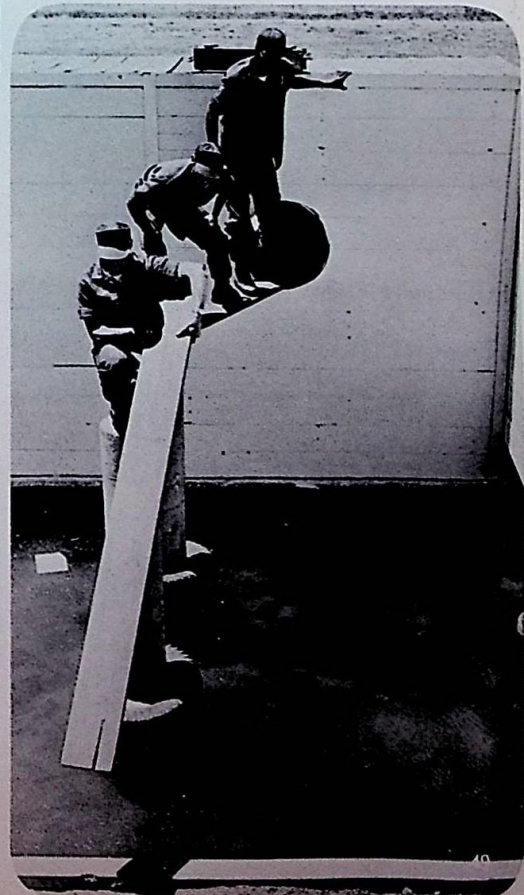

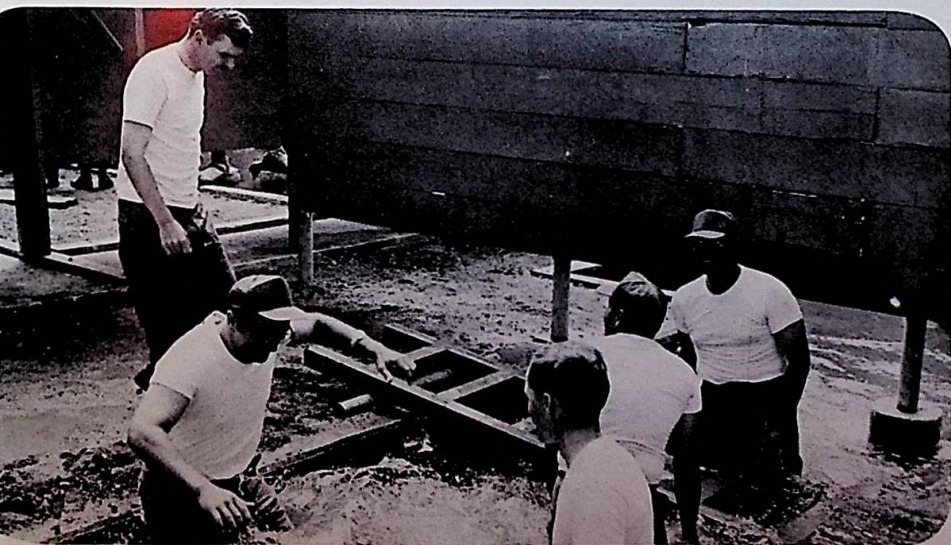

Tie the barrel--not the Cadet!

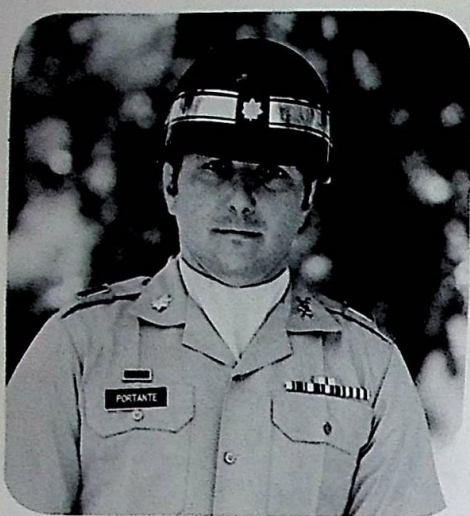

Where else can I hold her?

"We'll wait here until someone finds us."

"Can you hear me now?"

"And to what do we owe this pleasure"

"I say again, will everyone stand for a break-in-place."

". . . and then mama bear said, who's been eating my porridge . . . "

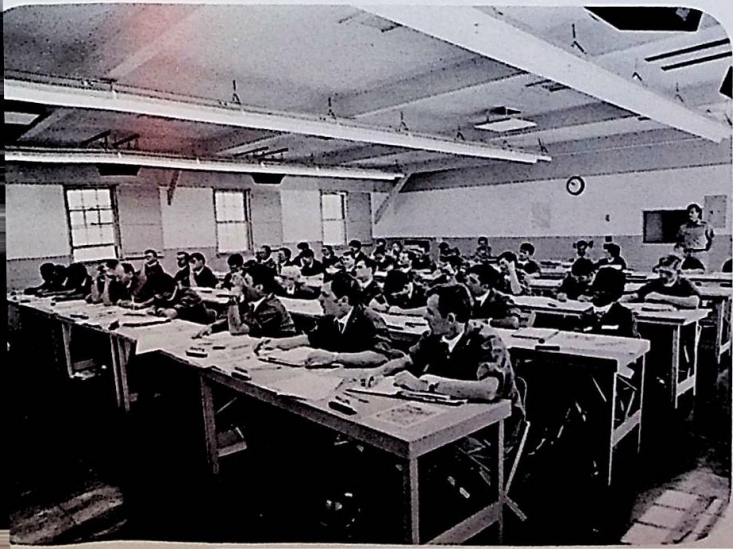

". . . and sweetheart I only got four hours sleep last night . . . "

Whew! And I thought I had problems.

First the paper battle - then the battle - it's enough to make you want to chew good conduct clusters.

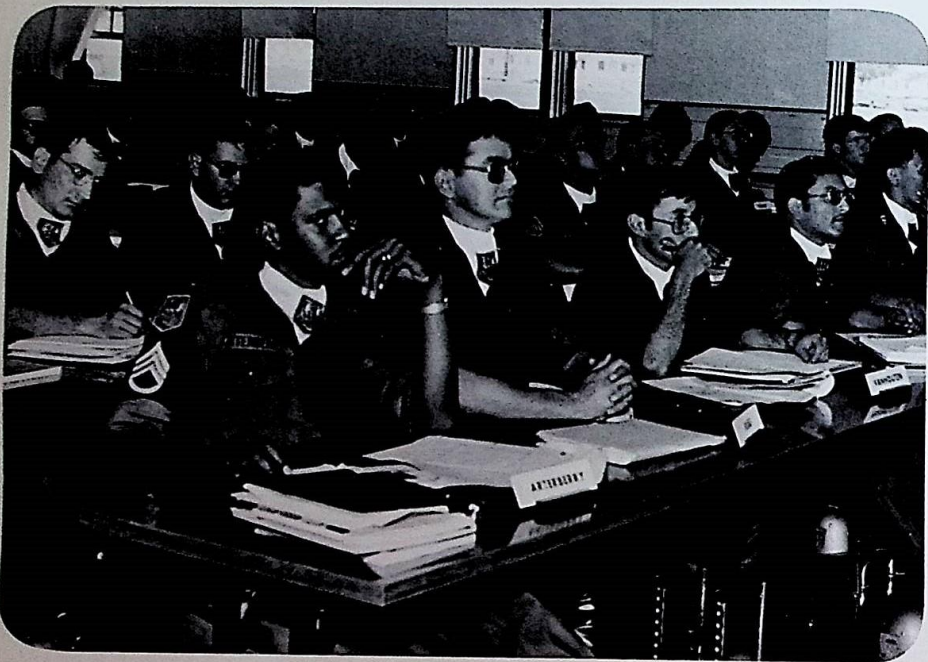

"... with a sharp stick"

"You're right. It is Pirate's Cove."

He said when I hit the door I should be a blurr.

Deja vu

"Would you please turn that Claymore around?"

"If I can sneak up on them and yell
"Bang", . . .
"And then you take your 5.56mm
Calibrated pencil . . ."

"You can take twice as many notes with two pencils."

"Sit on it"

"Why do you erase everything I write?"

"... and then it blew up in my face."
Are you sure this is how it was done in the "Great Escape"?

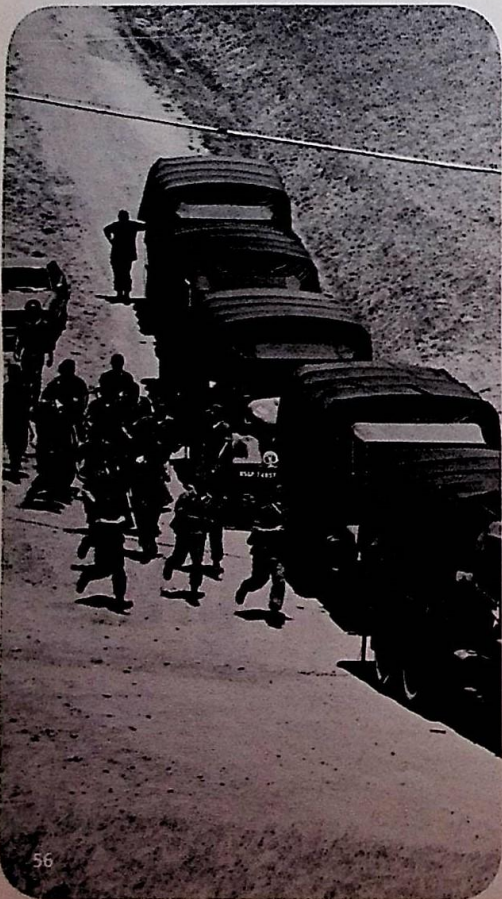

As a finale, we'll fire a round through the CMA Headquarters.

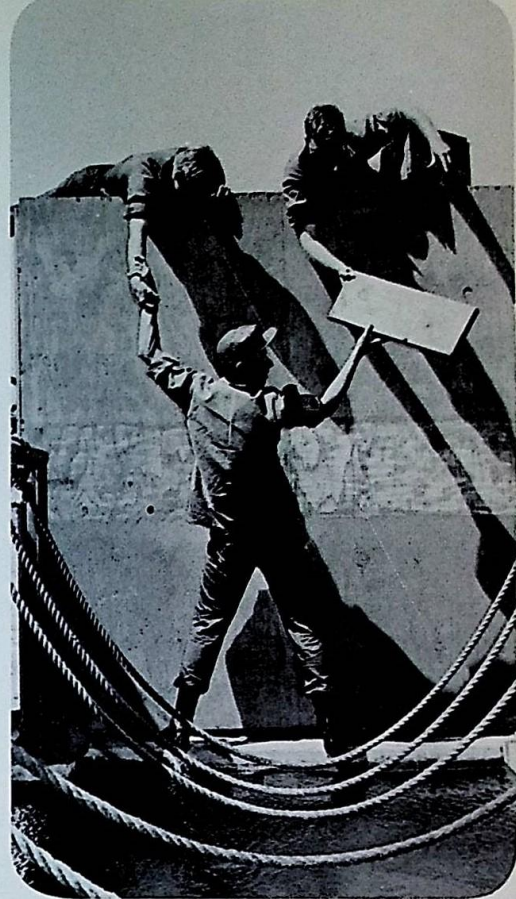

Wake me up when its my turn to fire.

"Just raise your hand if you have to use the sandbox."

My God! There's a TAC Officer down there!

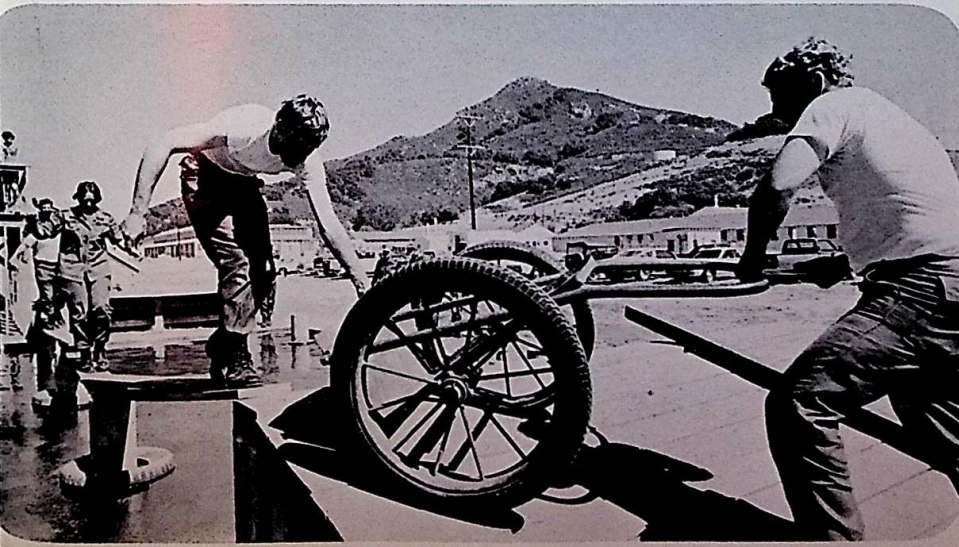

They'll never make it.

Pull faster! He's gaining on me.

Yes Cadet, your shoes are very stylish. Now keep moving.

If the Army wanted us to carry it across, they wouldn't have put wheels on it.

If you've changed your mind, you can turn around over there.

Do you always march with your eyes closed?

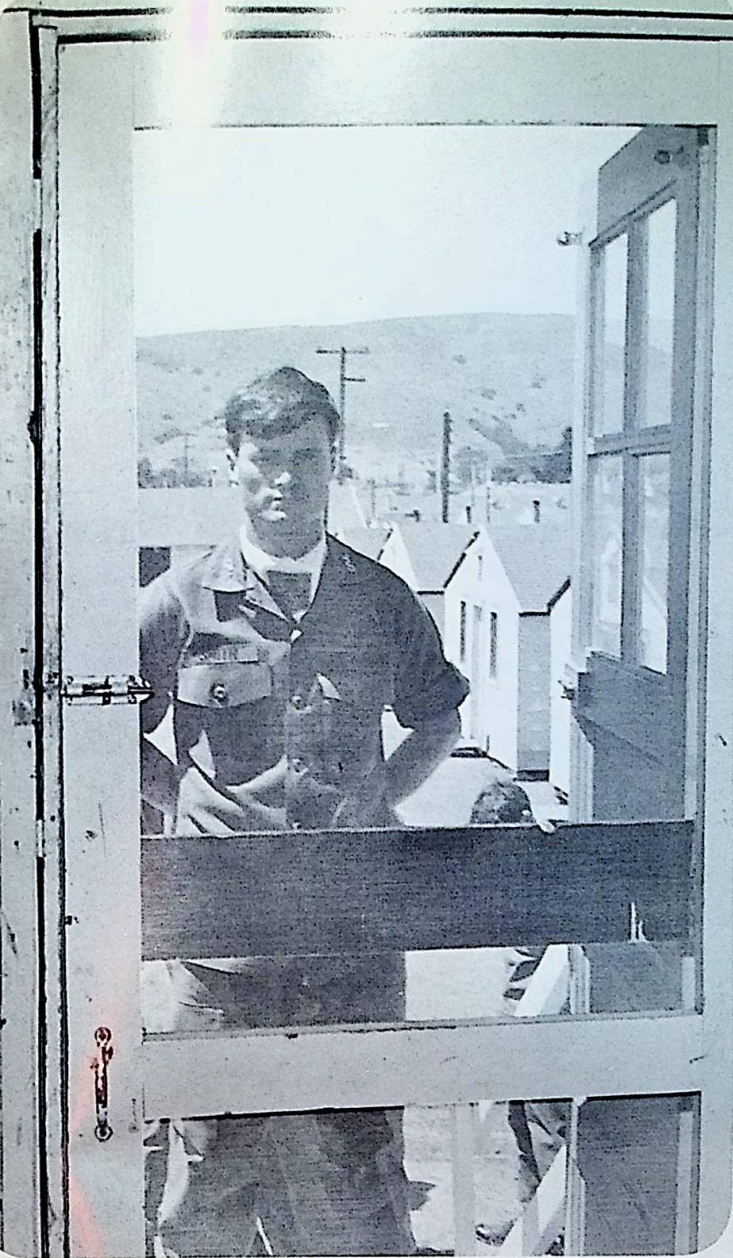

Now do you see it?

This guy is a mess.

I'm sure I'll have plenty of free time to peruse this at my leisure.

See how easy it is? I can march backwards.

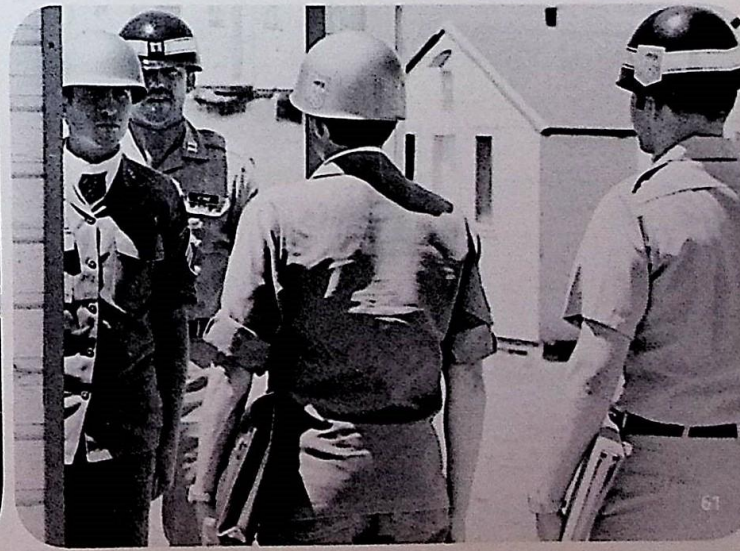

Is this part of the screening process?

No. You taste it first.

Whew! Nobody home.

Cadet. Why is your name spelled backwards?

Hi there.

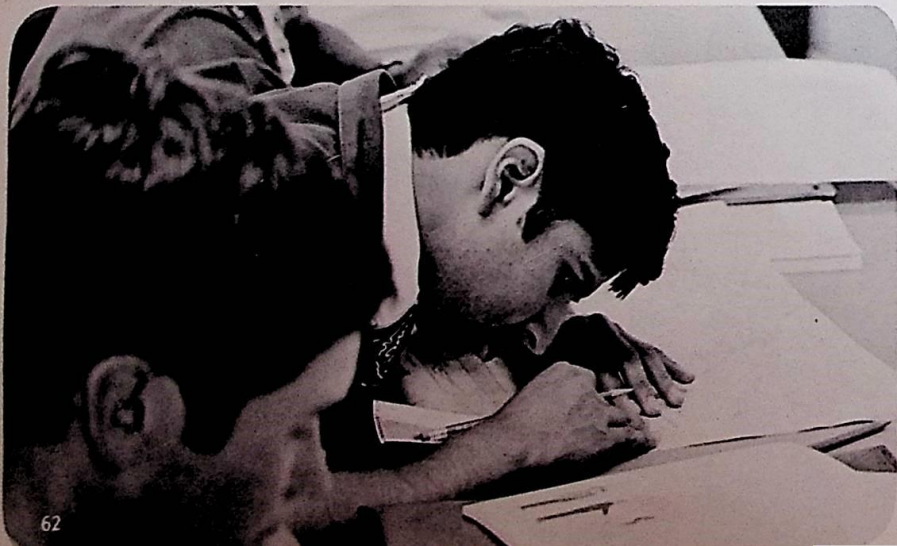

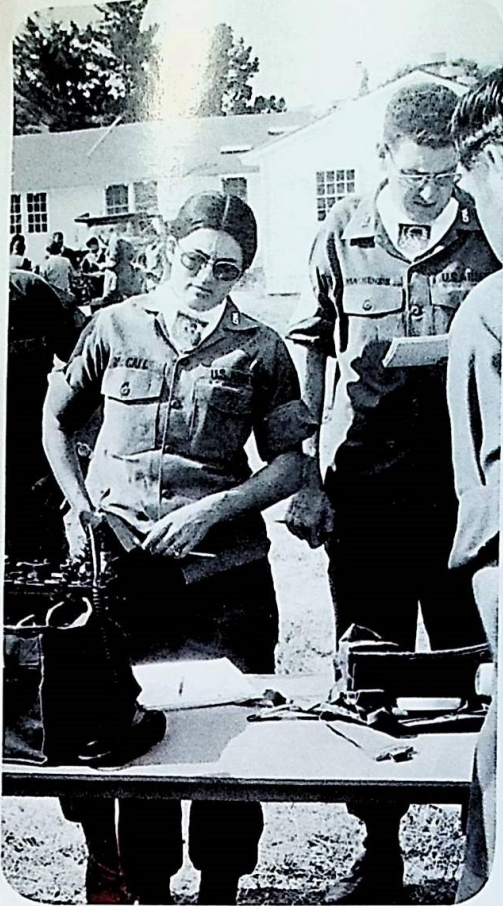

No Sir. I was not sleeping. My chair only has three legs.
Wow the San Luis Obispo Pigeons are trying to get me into trouble.

You see? These AAA maps ARE better.

That must be a CMA ant. He's following the road.

You say it works like a pay phone?

Isn't this the tactic that defeated the British at Lexington?

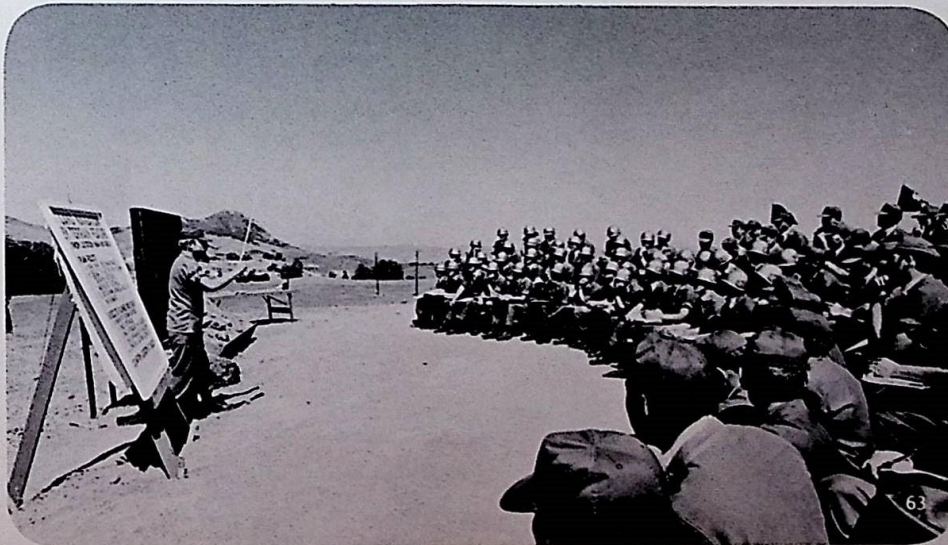

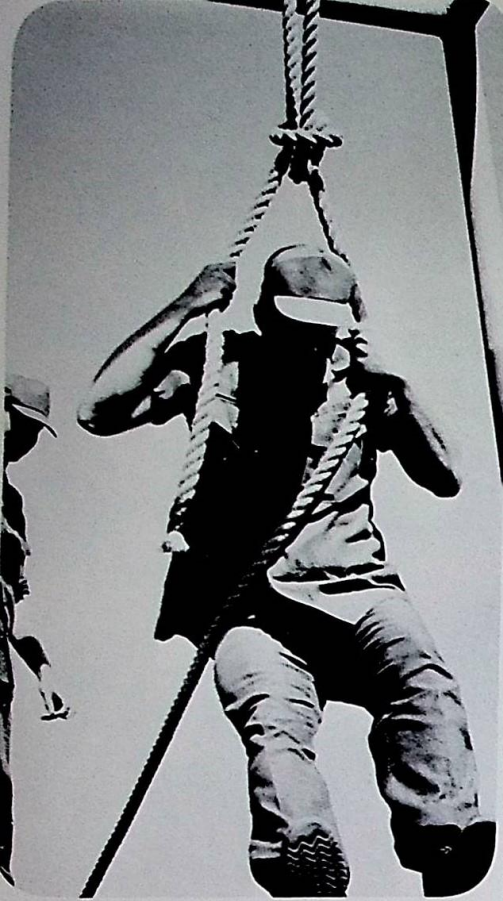

Whew! That was a bad joke.

If you grab it here, it will make your hair stand on end . . . if you have any.

Now everybody sing. "Its Howdy Doody time . . ."

Goodbye cruel world!
This is a milk run.

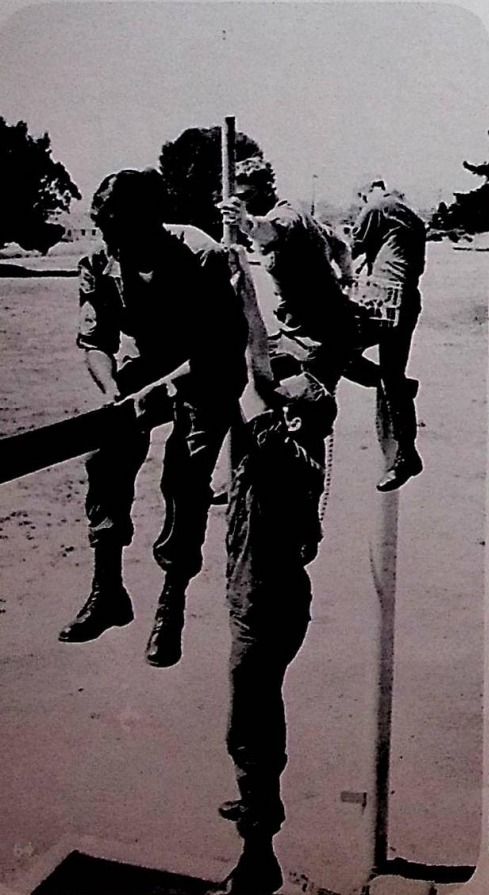

Help! A shark!

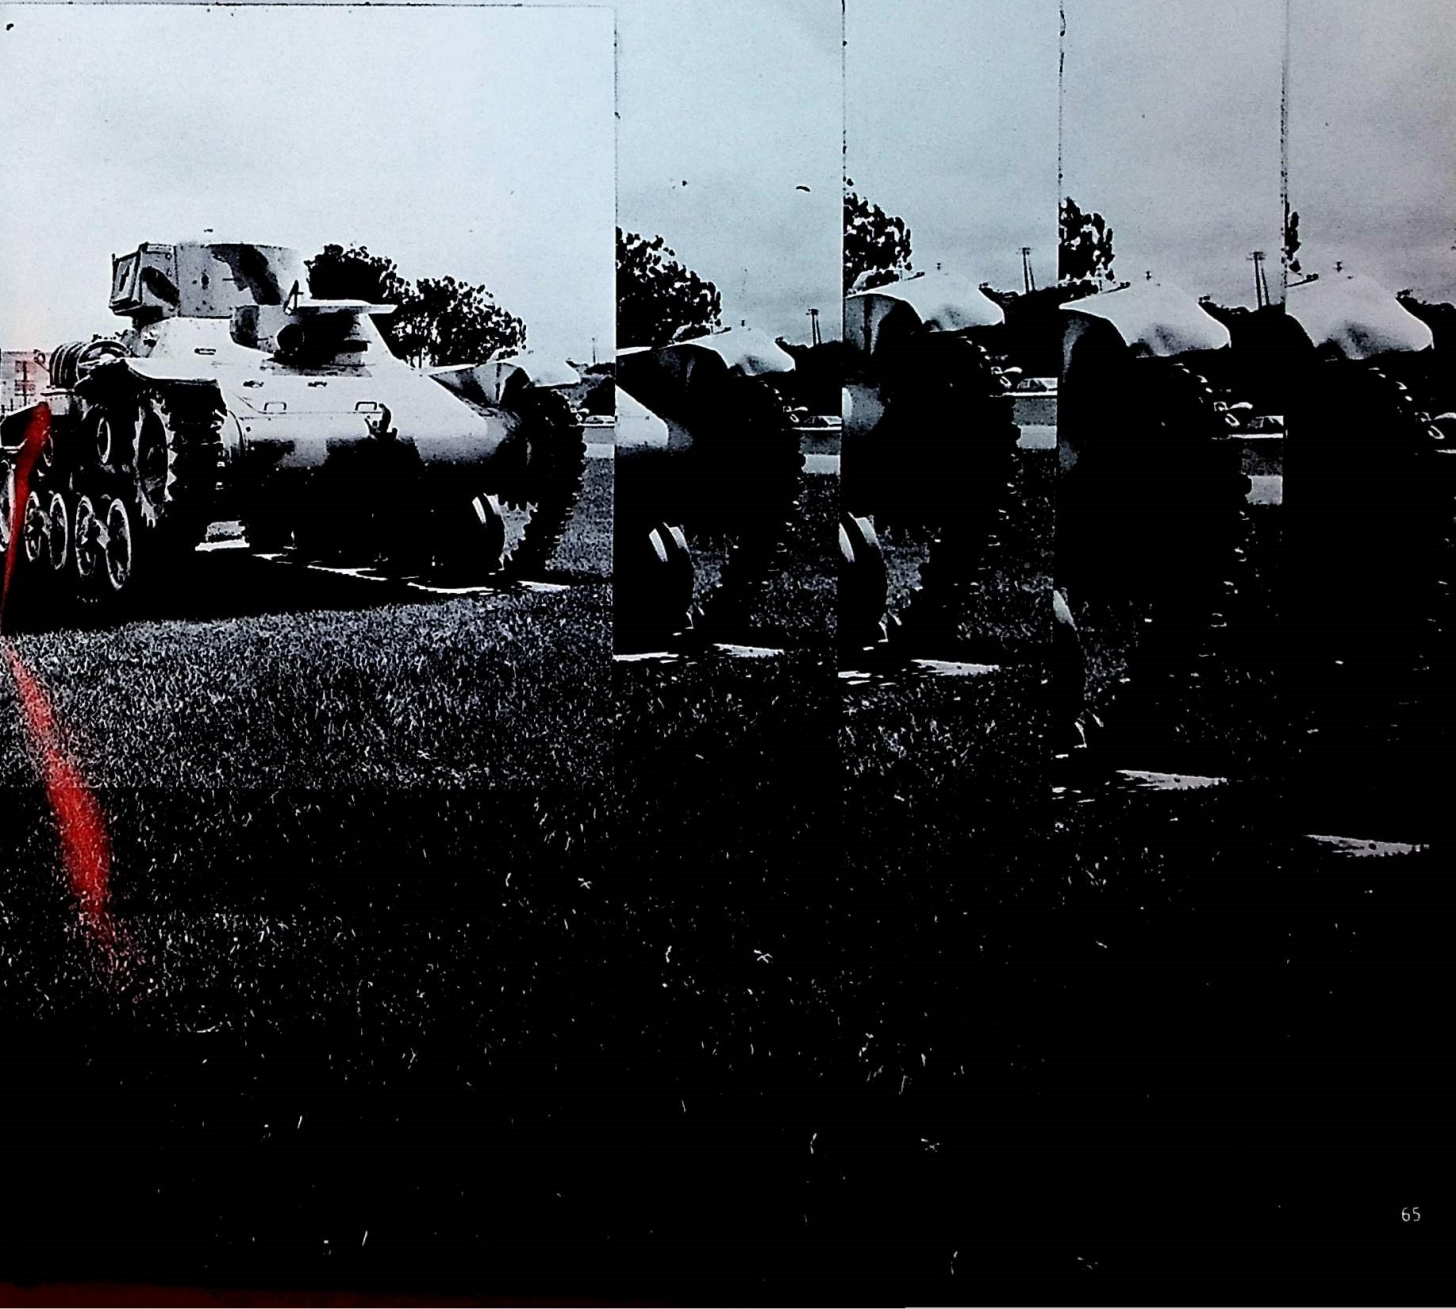

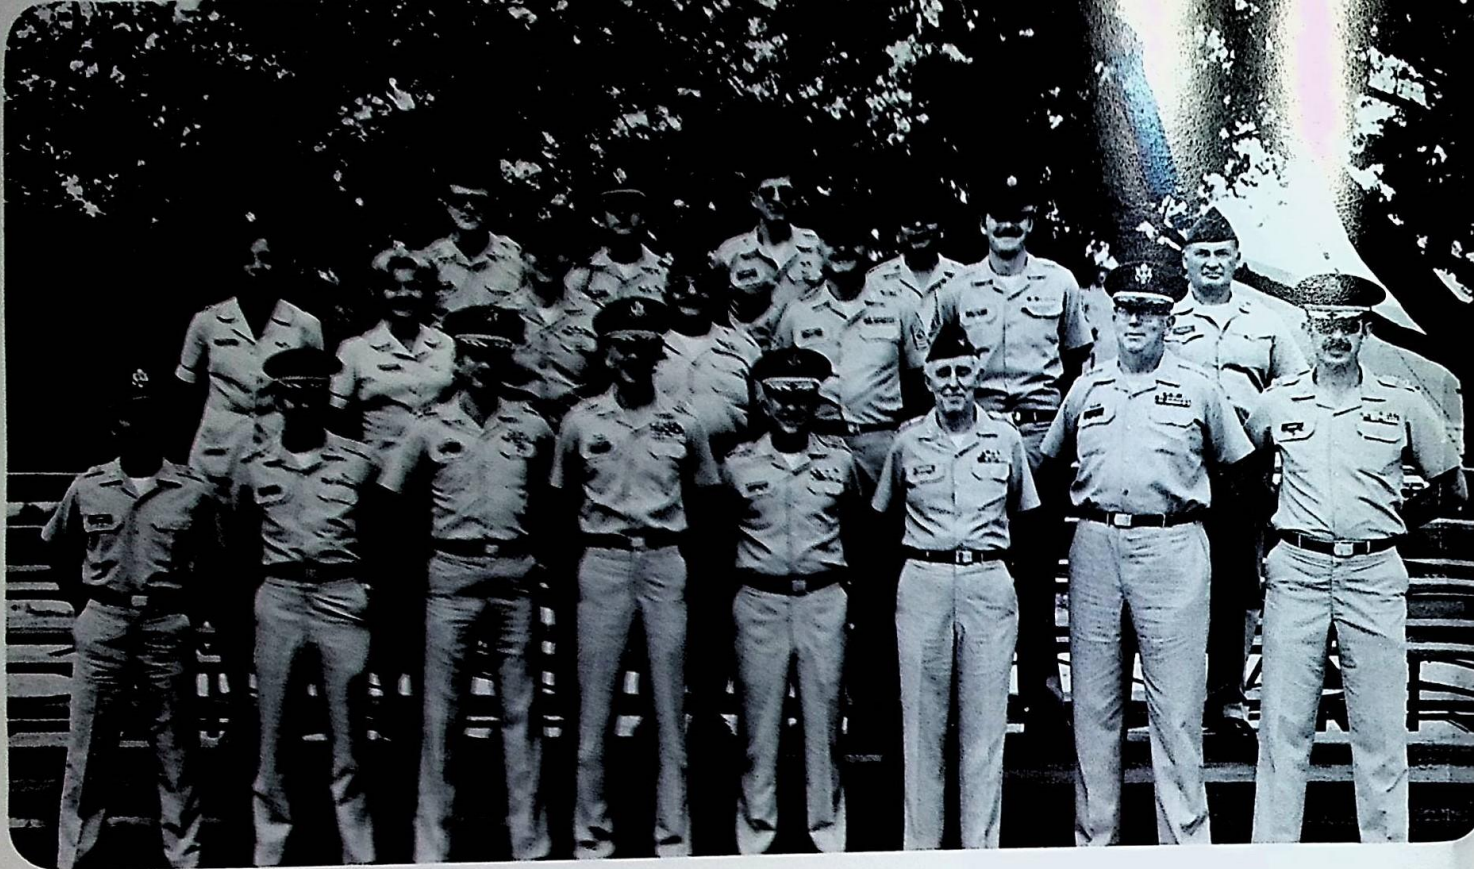

Wheeee!

I think we're ready for the Commandant.
