HISTORY OF CMA

This year marks the 26th year of the California Military Academy, the principal source of junior officers for the California Army National Guard.

The goal of the academy remains unchanged--to provide qualified, enthusiastic Second Lieutenants to the Army Reserve components. CMA graduates are commissioned in virtually all branches and within a year are assigned to the basic officer course at their branch school. The combination of CMA and branch school training provides a militarily qualified and professionally schooled officer to units throughout the state.

The majority of those who complete this program are assigned to units of the National Guard, although in recent years several officers have been assigned to the United States Army Reserve, which utilizes the CMA program as an avenue towards commissioning for qualified enlisted personnel. Numerous CMA graduates have entered the active Army; many have compiled distinguished records both in Vietnam and in a variety of domestic posts.

We strive to create a motivated trained officer; the benefits to the individual and to the unit are obvious. It is our stated intent, as well as our visible achievement, to present such individuals to you as newly-commissioned officers.

CMA CLASS OF 1977

Many are the paths to success in the modern Army National Guard of today. While some men and women prefer enlisted service to achieve the goals of national defense, others aspire to the officer corps.

With the graduation ceremonies June 11, 1977, 115 young men and women completed the challenge which took them through a year of tedious training at the California Military Academy. The regard for this rigorous schooling has additional responsibility--the responsibility which goes with a commission as a second lieutenant in the California Army National Guard and the United States Army Reserve.

From the first day of Phase I it was apparent that adversity would be a part of the testing of mental and physical endurance which leads to graduation. Classroom instruction was to be with us for a full year, but it was the simulated pressure of combat that helped develop leaders during Phase II at Camp San Luis Obispo. The cadence of rigorous schooling and hardening process which temper both body and spirit took its toll and it was apparent that only the truly dedicated would "tough it out".

During the 10 weekend drill periods of Phase III, instructional periods were well planned and presented. The weeding-out process continued as we applied classroom learned principles to actual situations. We were beginning to discover that we didn't know all the answers, but one question was being eliminated, the big question always asked by each cadet, "am I good enough?" The experiences and the confidence gained will serve as the cornerstones of the military careers of each member of the "Class of 1977".

With diligence and sincerity we, as CMA graduates, look forward to having our future endeavors reflect the traditions, as well as the expectations of this outstanding institution. The challenge is just as big to the CMA Class of 1978, that is, to "Learn Today and Lead Tomorrow".

Congratulations!

As Commander-In-Chief of the California National Guard, I rely upon its members to perform the missions of citizen-soldiers; the State's use of Guard personnel in emergencies and natural disasters is well-documented.

As you depart Camp San Luis Obispo for your new units, take with you my best wishes, and my charge to you to be prepared for those unfortunate circumstances in which I shall depend upon you and the organizations of which you are now leaders to render assistance to the citizens of this State.

EDMUND G. BROWN JR.
GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA

FRANK J. SCHOBBER
MAJOR GENERAL
COMMANDING
STATE MILITARY FORCES

11 June 1977

Congratulations to you upon your assumption of commissioned status. You have received training and now as you advance in rank and responsibility you will conduct training.

Training is the key to our success.

With good training, there is nothing we cannot accomplish; no emergency we cannot meet; no mission we cannot perform.

I refer to the training which you will provide as leaders, but I refer also to the training which you, as an officer, must complete within your own branch. This academy has afforded you both instruction and motivation, and it is my hope that you will build your careers upon both of these factors.

As officers - whatever rank you eventually assume - remember too that the worth of an Armed Force is found not in the excellence of its higher staffs and headquarters but rather in the ability, talent, motivation and morale of its soldiers at the first rank - at the front line, at the cutting edge of contact with the enemy.

Concurrently, with all formal training you conduct you will be informally training the Guard's soldiers in appearance, attitude and reaction whatever your station and wherever your assignment.

Be bold, be brave, train our soldiers and train them well!

Frank J. Schober, Sr.
FRANK J. SCHOBBER, SR.
Major General
Commanding

The voluntary acceptance of the initial grade in the commissioned ranks, with all its attendant responsibilities and challenges, is deserving of the heartiest congratulations and best wishes. Your leadership charge is a vital one in the future of our state and nation, and can only be achieved by your adherence to the highest standards of integrity, continuous professional enhancement and consistent, dedicated effort. I wish you well.

Congratulations upon your past achievements and your appointment as a commissioned officer.

You are about to assume a position of leadership in the National Guard, rich in tradition and in partnership with the Active Army -- a partnership so vital to the defense of this Nation.

You will be responsible for managing many resources; however, your sincerity and genuine interest in people must be one of your strongest assets - never forgetting each person is an individual with likes and dislikes, needs and desires. Learn as much about each fellow soldier as you can, and treat each one as a person. You must continue your enthusiasm and understand the importance of your job as it relates to the mission.

The success of the National Guard most assuredly rests upon you and its people - the men and women you work with and will ultimately lead.

11 June 1977

I hope you can see now why the past year was sometimes made difficult for you -- achievement is a thing of pride to the degree that it required striving for excellence.

This day marks a signpost, not an end. You have much ahead of you in the way of both experience and education upon which to build a solid contribution of leadership. Remember that we taught you "Learn Today - Lead Tomorrow." That statement is as valid for Captains as for Lieutenants; for General Officers as well as Colonels. Leadership -- like life -- is a constant learning process. Learn, retain and refine; success demands the prodding queries of an inquisitive mind.

I am proud to have commanded this academy; I know your subsequent careers will be a continuing source of pride to all of those who worked with you.
